(BHM.1215; Eimer 1168; JT.79a), nearly extremely fine £140-180

Captain Sir Samuel Brown (1776-1852) pioneered chain design and the use of chains in suspension bridge design. The Union Bridge linking England with Scotland and opened in 1820, was the first vehicular suspension bridge in Britain. Brown was the obvious choice to design the Royal Pier at Brighton [Brighthelmstone] which was primarily intended to be a landing stage for a packet boat service to Dieppe. It stood a little to the East of the present-day Palace Pier. The pier gradually became more and more dilapidated and was destroyed during a storm in 1896. The entrance toll-booth kiosks survived and are now used as small shops on the Palace Pier.

The legend on the medal's reverse gives the details of the plaque and its unveiling, INAUGURATION DE LA PLAQUE COMMÉMORATIVE DE S.M. EDOUARD VII PARC DE L'HOTEL METROPOLE CANNES-EDEN PRÉSIDÉE PAR S.A.I. Mgr LE GRAND DUC MICHEL DE RUSSIE 24 MARS, 1912. The Grand Duke Michael, the youngest son and fifth child of Alexander III and youngest brother of Nicholas II, was banished from Russia because of his morganatic marriage to the Countess Sophie de Torby, and lived in Cannes for much of the year. The recipient of the medal was Edward Ponsonby (1851-1920), 8th Earl of Bessborough.

304. Sir William Hamo Thornycroft, RA (1850-1925), rectangular cast bronze plaque for the Open Championship - Horticultural Prize, signed Hamo Thornycroft, RA Sc, undated (1920s), standing figure of Flora, framed by standard roses, irises and lilies, cherubs with scroll above and inscribed plaque below, 'PRESENTED BY TOOGOOD AND SONS LTD / SOVTHAMPTON / SEEDSMEN TO H.M. THE KING', 292 x 172mm., much as made, extremely fine and a delightful and scarce 'New Sculpture' plaquette £120-160

Amongst many commissions, Thornycroft sculpted Boadicea and her Daughters, on Westminster Bridge and the statues of Cromwell outside Parliament, Alfred the Great at Winchester, John Colet at St Paul's School and General Gordon.

Even though she would have been in her mid to late 50's, it has been suggested that Thornycroft's wife Agatha (1865-1958) was the model for the Toogood plaquettes of which there are several varieties.

Collection Only.

Giovanni Battista Nini was born in Urbino, Italy and worked as copperplate and glass engraver before becoming director of a crystal ware factory in Madrid. In 1760 he moved to Chaumont-sur-Loire, France, working for a local ceramic factory becoming its director in 1778.

Franklin had been appointed as the American envoy to France in September 1776, where he was to stay until 1785. This medal was made by Nini when Franklin was a guest of Nini's patron, Jacques-Donatien Le Ray du Chaumont (1726-1803) – a French "Father of the American Revolution" and also portrayed on a terracotta medal by Nini (B & S 104). Franklin sent five or six cases packed with medals to America but they were lost in a shipwreck off the French coast at Noirmoutier. At least four cases were recovered and subsequently stored at a customs' warehouse in Nantes and forgotten. Rediscovered in 1830, they were sold on to agents of the navy and again forgotten until two cases were bought in 1876 by a French collector, Mr Myrvoix, from whom Spink & Son acquired a number of examples which were offered in the Numismatic Circular at 25/- each.

Édouard-Pierre Blin (1877-1946)

Haig moved his General Headquarters to Montreuil-sur-Mer in March 1916 as the town was well-placed for all aspects of the war in France. The original statue which was inaugurated in 1931 was destroyed by the Germans in 1940 and in 1950 an identical replacement was unveiled – the only equestrian statue of a British military figure in France. The sculptor Paul Maximilien Landowski (1875-1961) is best known for his massive "Christ the Redeemer" in Rio de Janiero, Brazil.
